THE LAW

To maintain certification status, and with few exceptions, a certified member of a joint health and safety committee (JHSC) in Ontario must complete a Certification Refresher program approved by the Ministry of Labour's Chief Prevention Officer and within three years of completing Certification Part II and every three years thereafter. The training standard sets out key content to be covered over a minimum of six hours, plus adult education principles to be incorporated. Those who don't maintain Certification status will have to retrain in all three parts of Certification training to regain their certified status. Like all Certification training, this Refresher program must be delivered by an approved provider.

WHSC CAN HELP

Just as Workers Health & Safety Centre (WHSC) is an approved provider of Part I and Part II Certification programs, WHSC is also approved to deliver Certification Refresher training. WHSC Certification Refresher revisits key concepts from Certification training. The program further affords participants the opportunity to share and discuss new or amended legislation / guidelines / standards, current or emerging issues, plus best practices for hazard elimination and control.

FOCUSED ON HAZARDS

In keeping with the hazard-based approach to protecting workers that forms the basis of health and safety law, WHSC Certification Refresher also explores the shortcomings of behaviour-based safety and why hazard elimination or exposure control is most effective in safeguarding worker well-being and meeting legal obligations.

WHSC Certification Refresher training consists of the following list of topics:

- ▶ Recent developments
- ▶ RACE review — recognize, assess, control and evaluate hazards
- ▶ Best practices for RACE
- ▶ Rights, functions and duties of all workplace parties
- ▶ Health & safety policy and program.
